This is virtually the object of the silver bill, and exhibits the true sentiment of the greenback party.

We would suppose that any man with common sense, could see that the effect of such a law would be to eventually work injustice to the laboring lowed. man and the producer.

While the large issues of that kind adjourned until July 28, A. D. 1879, at ed for the occasion of money would immediatly appreciate the price of such commodities as the laborer must necessarily purchase, it would not, as past experience has shown, increase the price of labor and farm products in the same ratio. The of houses in cities into gardens, has been carried out by the Paimer House in Chisilver bill is simply a fraud and a cheat and every man of any business experience, and endowed with ordinary servatory. The structure is entirely of judgement, cannot fail to see it in that light. This measure is on a par with the entire greenback creed, there is not a single principle of the party that stories above. A fine collection of rare shows sound business experience and and tropical plants has been provided, and good sense.

The only safe policy to pursue upon this subject, is for the government to coin no more silver than is necessary for a subsidiary currency used to sup- NOTICE .ply the wants of trade; and that should contain enough silver so that there could be no possible chance for a bullion monopoly, the balance of our currency should be gold and paper. The government should modify the national banking law, so as to induce capitalists to embark in the business of national banking, in the the place of driving capital out of that channel as the law now does. Such a modification would increase the number of national banks and bring an additional revenue into the U. S. Treasury; and would give additional strength to our United States notes. No substance should be used as a currency g based upon its intrinsic worth, unless the currency thus made, and the in- sign and trinsic worth of the material used are equal. With such a regulation we would have no difficulty in keeping our currency healthy, and saving the NOTICE .people from loss in business.
